Hun Attack in Crimea

Developing

LONDON, Sept. 25.—(CP)—British aid for the Russian armies is being rushed to the eastern front in a rapidly increasing tide. It was authoritatively reported today as dispatches to London painted a darkening outlook for the Red forces both at Leningrad and in the Crimea in the south.

With the Royal Air Force only yesterday declared to be flying in battle on the eastern front, a reliable source said today British troops soon may be in action with the Russians against the Germans.

Furthermore, newspaper speculation that British Imperial troops might be sent from Iran into the Soviet Caucasus to aid the Russian armies assumed new significance with disclosure of a series of military staff conferences involving troops in this area.

NAZIS USE BIG FORCE

A report in authoritative circles said a German offensive in the Crimea was developing by a force which "may be anything up to four divisions," an attack apparently aimed at the whole Crimean peninsula rather than at just a few strategic points.

Wavell's Visit May Precede an Important Move

LONDON, Sept. 25.—(CP)—Visits to London of Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell, commander-in-chief in India, disclosed Wednesday, was viewed by the Daily Express today as a possible prelude to an important military move in the Middle East.

Gen. Wavell discussed with the war cabinet and the Imperial General Staff details of important military developments which may soon take place, the Express said in its newspaper story.

"He went fully into Britain's strategy in the defense of the Middle East, as well as the plans for Anglo-Russian cooperation in the Middle East if the war comes," it said.

The Daily Telegraph said Gen. Wavell, under whose command the Imperial operations in Syria and Iran have been conducted, has been consulted on the extent to which allied operations in the Middle East may be limited by the need to supply the British army in the Middle East.

"A rapidly increasing tempo of the newspapers' reports of a formidable British army in assembling in the Middle East, and while there may be technical difficulties in the way of relieving pressure on the Russian armies by Allied operations in Western Europe, direct support must be given in defense of the Caucasus mountains."

The Telegraph added that it is believed that many weeks will elapse before the Germans can develop any serious and direct threat to Transcaucasia.

Today's War Moves

By LOUIS F. KEMLE Copyright, 1941, by British United Press

LATEST war developments indicate that Great Britain feels stronger and believes that Russia has a chance to hold out for a long time. Britain's fear of invasion has receded to a low point. The stand the Russians are making has created a feeling which certainly did not exist a month ago.

Publicly, the British do not admit such a feeling on either point, because they do not want to create a complacent attitude or slackening of the war effort. The threat of German invasion is still presented as real.

London apparently hopes that British air forces will serve to keep Russia fighting well into next year, at least, even if the does have to abandon much of her western territory in a slow retreat.

SENDING TANKS, PLANES The disclosure in London of the extent of Britain's present and contemplated shipments of tanks to Russia is illuminating. A substantial proportion of production is being sent to Russia.

"A rapidly increasing tempo of the newspapers' reports of a formidable British army in assembling in the Middle East, and while there may be technical difficulties in the way of relieving pressure on the Russian armies by Allied operations in Western Europe, direct support must be given in defense of the Caucasus mountains."

LAW CONFLICTS WITH 'FREEDOM OF SEAS' POLICY

Resolution Is Introduced To Repeal U.S. Neutrality Act

Anglo-Russian Allies Meet in Iran

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—(AP)—Senator Kenneth McKellar (Dem., Tenn.) introduced in the senate today a resolution to repeal the neutrality act which bars the arming of United States merchant ships and prevents them from entering combat zones.

Declaring that the act is "in direct conflict with our freedom of the seas policy," McKellar said that the law should be repealed outright.

The Tennessee senator has been a consistent supporter of the administration's foreign policy, but there was no immediate indication as to whether he introduced the repeal resolution with the knowledge of senate leaders.

President Roosevelt said Tuesday revision or repeal of the act is being studied, indicating action might be forthcoming within a week.

McKellar said he thought that while the law is on the statute books, the government "is giving virtually no attention to it" and that reason 8 ought to be repealed.

Senator Robert Taft (Rep.-Ohio) said:

U.S. Navy Helps Slash Atlantic Shipping Losses

Japanese Troops Of Occupation In Psychological War Attempt Nazi Tactics

By LELAND STOWE

(Special Cable To The Chicago Daily Tribune)
RANGOON, Burma, Sept. 25.—Japanese troops of occupation in southern Indo-China are waging a vigorous psychological offensive to impress the hard-boiled Cambodian and Annamite natives with their hard-boiled qualities as warriors. They thereby apparently hope to put the Indo-Chinese into a mood of docile acceptance of complete domination by their new masters from Nippon.

Reports Indicate State Of Siege Declared By Nazi Forces In Paris

LONDON, Sept. 25.—(CP)—The British Broadcasting Corporation said Wednesday night unconfirmed reports from Vichy indicated a state of siege had been declared in Paris. The BBC said no further details were available.

The declaration of a state of siege by the German forces of occupation follows widespread outbreaks of violence and disorder in the former French capital.

During the past few weeks 38 persons have been executed either by the Germans or on other grounds. Tuesday night six persons were convicted by a special anti-Communist court of spreading propaganda and were sentenced to prison terms running as high as 12 years.

Strict air raid precautions were ordered in Paris and vicinity Tuesday.

A thousand years, the latter peace and the rebirth of democracy. Europe is tired. It is looking to Canada. They will come to Canada at the conclusion of this war.

Canada is the promised land, and with great leadership 25 years of progress will be made in a brief post-war emigration period.

In that period there will come to Canada a new generation of people who will be attracted to it, great industry and business.

It is the duty of the Canadian people to assist this leadership in forming. To let side with political differences and join in the great task of achieving Canada's destiny.

Canada's great day is coming, but while waiting its dawn, you must give the destiny of your country the best of your efforts.

Mr. Baxter concluded, "The man who looks for his mind off the ground is a fool."

He stressed the value of the word picture of scenes in Portugal when survivors of the battle were put through their mental paces.

Good But Not Good Enough

Canadians can hardly pride themselves, or rest content with the outcome of two and a half months of voluntary curtailment of the waste of gasoline. The appeal was launched early in July. The net result has been a drop in consumption to a point six per cent below the figures for the corresponding period last year. For the preceding months this year consumption has been less than more than for the first six months last year. Roughly, the amount now being used is 26 per cent below the level in the early part of this year.

That is a good showing, but not good enough. It is far from the 50 per cent curtailment that was asked for. It is plain that all across the Dominion great numbers of motorists have responded loyally to the call; but equally clear that large numbers have not done so. Supplies are still low, and certain to remain low, the heedless ones are committing continuous acts of something very like sabotage, against the drivers who refrain from waste, against their own prospect of getting fuel a few weeks or months hence, and in some measure against the all-out expansion and operation of our fighting forces at home and overseas.

Patriotism, prudence and fairness all demand that unnecessary driving be stopped.

We Can't Leave It To Russia

For Canadians, as for the people of Britain, of the United States, and of every other country who do not want to lose their freedom and become as the people of France, the moral of the Russian reverse in the East is clear.

The Russians have been putting up a splendid fight, but we can't leave it to them to win the war for us. They are not able to do so, they might get tired trying if they found they were not getting a full measure of support from countries whose fate is equally at stake. They are not able to do so, they have the democracies, but to save themselves. They have a right to expect the democratic peoples of the world to support them, and they would have made if Russia had not been drawn into the conflict.

When Hitler suddenly attacked his communist ally he has opened to his enemies in the field armies totalling perhaps sixteen millions of men. A wave of encouragement and of confidence surged through all the nations at war with the Axis, and all the nations still neutral but hostile to the Hitler plans. Confidence is one thing, but over-confidence is quite something else. The Duke of Windsor, for instance, made a mistake when he took on this new antagonist. But the democracies will make just as bad a mistake if they allow their efforts to slacken because they did so. The way to capitalize on his folly is to redouble their own exertions.

Canada needs men for its fighting forces, thousands of them. It depends upon patriotism to fill up the ranks. There is a magnificent spirit of sacrifice evoked. It comes to every citizen of military age and fitness. Are Canadians less ready to fight for heart and honor than the Russians? No, they are not. But the Russian people, the question with which the reverse in the Ukraine confronts every fit man in this Dominion.

Borrowing To Pay

Vichy has borrowed a new block of $276,000,000 from the Bank of France, to pay the board bill of the army of occupation. When and from whom the Bank of France will get back the money, or whether it will ever be repaid, are questions of no concern to Hitler and with which Britain is not at all to be concerned. The money is not a practical way. He must hand over the date, wherever he gets the money, however, and with whatever future consequences to France.

The money of course represents goods, which the people of France have produced or must produce to satisfy the monetary demands thus created—and the appetites of their unwanted guests. Neither is there any time wasted in making up accounts and showing that all the cash handed over is spent in maintaining the German forces. More than likely a good share of the lump sum payments find their way to Germany to help foot the war bill there.

Together Vichy has borrowed $2,900,000,000 with which to feed and house the Nazi garrisons, in about a year and three months. The longer it lasts the larger the bill will grow. If the remainder of France is occupied it will go up faster. One way or another, directly or indirectly, such a bill always has to be paid. The French taxpayers will suffer. There is no financial jugglery by which they can support themselves, and also support the alien army that has quartered itself upon them at no extra cost or at anything less than the real cost in human energy.

The failure of France is being eaten up by the horde of officials and occupation troops, maintained by Frenchmen to keep themselves in slavery.

Major Decisions In The War Depend On Attitude Of U.S.

Hesitant American Policy Retards Decision Action On Part Of Great Britain

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

There is no denying the gravity of the moment. It is grave for Russia, grave for Britain, grave also, for Germany.

Agreeing that Russia is to be taken by Britain and Greece and by the United States, for it cannot be taken by Britain without the United States.

Hitler's attack on Russia was launched for the purpose of making it clear that he would not continue his war on Britain, risking complete American intervention, with a doubtful Russia as his ally.

Back, and without the certainty of fuel supplies for his Panzer divisions, Germany's weak spot is oil.

Hitler underestimated the resistance of Russia, but he knew that it would be a huge costly war. He also knew, however, that he would not have to suffer upon the agonizing fear that his armies would run out of gas.

In an all-out blitzkrieg, Germany uses two and a half million tons of oil per month. She can produce synthetically from three to five hundred thousand tons per month, and from Rumania and Poland she can get another eight million tons per year. It is not nearly enough for a prolonged war.

Short of Oil At the time of the collapse of France, she was desperately short. But victory brought her a great haul of reserves from the countries she occupied in the Balkan campaign and the war on Russia.

In the latter case, Hitler took the greatest gamble of his life. His problem was whether to risk everything he had in an offensive campaign, or to go on the defensive until he could rebuild reserves. He took the risk.

Germany's oil reserves are not nearly enough for a prolonged war. Hitler cannot wage a major campaign next spring. If he gets it he can wage a defensive campaign. If he does not get it, this war will never touch our shores.

Hitler wants to destroy the Red Army and get a separate peace that will put him in possession of Russia's oil wells.

Would Russia under any circumstances conclude a separate peace with Germany? The answer is political as well as military and depends on the United States.

Just before the collapse of France, Paul Reynaud asked for a definite report on the American situation. Had he been able to assure himself that the United States was going to see this war through to victory, he could have gotten a majority for continuing it with the fleet and from the African colonies. That would have greatly increased the pressure on the United States from West Africa.

Stalin Wants to Know Today, Russia is in the same position. It is perfectly certain that the United States is going to see this war through to victory. Hitler will have every reason to hold front, even if at the Ural, and Hitler will still have to fight. But the Russians have got a lot of verbal aid and not much else. The position of the United States is still a question mark.

Hitler has reserved complete freedom of action so far as Russia is concerned. He has not demanded the United States as a peace aim, the destruction of the Nazi regime, Hitler and Mussolini, and a demand with a less unequivocal demand: the destruction of the Bolshevik menace.

Tokyo Takes Time Out

The peace-talks at Tokyo have been suspended until the Japanese ambassadors get back to Washington. Also until it is clear from the Tokyo standpoint which way the war is to go.

The cabled predictions that an accord would be reached before the color about the time Nazi forces surged ahead across the lower Dnieper. They will probably not revive unless the Hitler forces meet with disaster there or elsewhere.

Should the Russians suffer continuing reverse, there is a Japanese army newly posted in Manchuria and to sweep across the border into Siberia and attack them in the rear. The peace thermometer at Tokyo rises and falls with the progress of the war.

Nothing has happened to take Japan out of the conspiracy, and the war-makers who shape the national policy, perhaps despite Premier Konohe, are realists. If Hitler wins they want to be in on the world plunder. But if he loses they do not want to face his emptied store.

The interruption of the negotiations may be less important than it seems. The break is said to have occurred when Washington made it the first condition in a general settlement of Far Eastern questions that Japan would promise to make no further armament.

Naturally such a proposition would have been rejected. It is said that this makes peace in the Pacific any less likely does not follow. Axis negotiators have been found to be worth nothing in Europe, and are of doubtful value more in the Orient.

Something swiftly approaching a state of civil war appears to have developed in Yugoslavia, where the Quisling cabinet threatens to call on German troops to suppress the "rebels". The latter are said to be made up of Serbs and Croats.

German Trick

BIRMINGHAM MAIL

There is always evidence to support a story which has existed in the minds of some time that the Germans are deliberately bombing civilians in occupied territory so as to give the impression that the R.A.F. are the culprits. By this means they hope, no doubt, to create bad feeling against Great Britain, and so make the defeated countries—and particularly France—more willing to co-operate with their German masters.

Actual proof is naturally most difficult to obtain, but there is such a chain of circumstantial evidence by this line as to seem conclusive.

A resident of Brest, on his arrival in London, stated that it had often been noticed that air raids which began on the port were resumed, after an interval of about half an hour, on the residential areas of the town itself. Whereas in the case of the port, the bombs were dropped by the Luftwaffe, in the case of the residential areas, the second caused considerable damage to houses and heavy casualties among the civilian population. The bombs were picked up in the town on the mornings after the raids were found to be of German manufacture.

Hitler will turn with renewed fury, with greatly augmented resources and with a new determination against the western powers.

As has been pointed out in news dispatches, Hitler was very short of oil when he concluded the armistice with France. His Balkan campaign was a bold gamble to obtain a sufficient quantity of oil. His campaign is to guarantee him a satisfactory and continuous supply in all times and in all places.

If Hitler turns triumphant from Russia, he will attack Britain with none of the oil he has been accumulating. He will be uncertain of supply of war materials.

He will go all out to capture the British oil fields in the world with sufficient strength to challenge his domination of the earth.

Aid To Russia All these calamities depend upon the fall of Russia. And the fall of Russia can only be brought about by a failure of war material.

América Disunited

Thus, at the moment when Russia is in a most critical situation and America must make momentous decisions, America is a picture of rancorous disunity and unresolvability.

This is the way wars are lost and nations destroyed.

Statesmanship is not to wait and see, but to foresee. Analysis which is disinterested and cool leads to one logical conclusion. This country should declare war on Hitler and Mussolini.

Fall Of Russia Would Endanger World

Aid To Soviet Armies Essential If War Is To End Soon With British Victory

By HAROLD L. WEIR

The fall of Kiev and the resultant threat to the Don basin, the greatest industrial region of Russia, contains a grave danger to the democratic nations who are desperately striving to halt Hitler's victory march across the civilized world.

The one factor that has transformed the efforts of the democratic nations to halt the advance of Hitler's armies is the mechanization of war.

Hitler's army is not only a more powerful machine than the armies of the past, but it is also a more efficient one.

Here's How U.S. Shipbuilders Rush Vessels To Completion To Carry Aid To Britain

First section of a Liberty Ship's keel is lowered onto the ways at one of the 19 yards now making them.

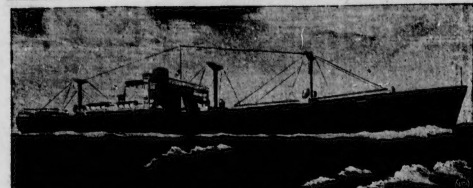

Centre strip of the keel is laid, bottom plates placed.

Keel level view shows sub-assemblies in place and fanning out from the keel.

THERE'S going to be a great day come Sept. 27 when Uncle Sam celebrates "Liberty Fleet Day" all the way from Quincy, Mass., to Portland, Ore., via Pascagoula, Miss. Big feature will be launching of the first three of the new Liberty Ships—commonly and disconcertingly referred to heretofore as Ugly Ducklings—and nine other merchant ships. Under the Maritime Commission's urging, American shipyards have broken all records in production of the Liberty Ships. Taken in several shipyards, these pictures show how the first three Ugly Ducklings have been built in from four months and three days to four months and 27 days. That's against the World War record of six months and five days from keel laying to launching. They'll carry arms to Allies.

An artist's conception of what the EC-2 type—Ugly Duckling or Liberty Ship as you prefer, will look like when put into service. Twenty of them will be commissioned before the end of the year.

A completed inner bottom, frames beginning to raise at the sides.

How to stern view, showing decks rising between the bulkheads.

New Hats For London Postwomen

Each week shows the women of England playing an increasingly important role in their country's war effort. A postwoman, left, tries on a new type of hat with the help of a mirror. The old type, worn by the young lady on the right, had a tendency to getting knocked off by the overhanging roof of the mail van, albeit the old model, somewhat like that of the Aussies, had a certain fashion flare about it.

Queen Mary Reviews Canucks

Her Majesty Queen Mary chats with the lieutenant-colonel (unidentified) of an Ontario regiment during a recent comprehensive visit to various army establishments in the south of England. She inspected the army school of cookery, a home for children of soldiers' families, and took the salute at a march past of the Ontario regiment, of which she is colonel-in-chief. This is the first picture of the queen-mother to reach Canada in many months.

Five-Alarm Fire Hits Boston

With coast guardsmen and sailors converging from nearby stations, and apparatus from towns within a ten-mile radius summoned in a general alarm, flames consume four B & M Railroad storage warehouses in the shadow of the state prison walls in Boston's Charlestown sector, resulting in a three-quarters of a million damage bill. Firemen fought eight hours to subdue the fire and convicts were called out to saturate prison buildings.

Gather The Harvest To Music

British soldiers have come to the aid of farmers in Southeastern England and are offsetting the farm shortage by taking a turn in the harvest fields. But they work according to their own rules and the most important is that harvesting is fun. Above an accordion player supplies music while they work. The wagon is loaded with corn already gathered.

Spitsbergen Children In England

These small guests nibbling on raw vegetables from the garden of their new home in England are Spitsbergen children who were evacuated along with their parents from the Arctic island by Allied forces. Dressed in gaily embroidered clothes, some with zippers, they impress their British hosts as "very charming".

Help! Hollers Hitler

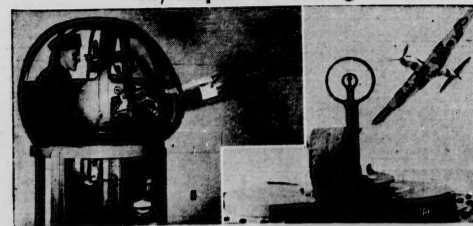

Signs in Belgium asking for volunteers to help Germany against Russia is one more small proof that the Germans suffered terrific losses in manpower.

Travelling Grandma

Mrs. A. S. Henley, 58-year-old California grandmother, who has already covered 19,000 miles of South America's highways in almost a year of driving, is pictured here with Hector Burr, her traveling companion, on their arrival at Lima, Peru.

Sky Snipers In Training

Today in Canada thousands of R.C.A.F. and Empire gunners are receiving training in schools of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan. From sunrise to sunset young men with keen eyes and keen minds learn to shoot straight and fast. Gunners go through much of their training in ground technical rooms. In the photo at left a gunner-in-training can be seen to get a bead on his target from a turret trainer. The beam gun records his score as he fires at model aircraft "flying" 20 to 30 feet away. After ground training comes the real thing in the air. The photo at right shows how an approaching aircraft looks as it nears the sight range of the gunner.
